IT WAS WHISKY.

In Connection With Bad Health that Caused Jesse Marlow to Defraud The Cincinnati Cigar Company.

What Will Be The Final Result?

Jesse Marlow, a trusted employee of the Cincinnati Cigar Company, was arrested at his home near Patterson last Friday, charged with defrauding the company.

There are four charges against him, two in Hancock county for embezzlement and two in Breckenridge for combined embezzlement and forgery.

His mode of fraudulent work consisted in making out false checks to parties, who had never delivered any staves, then taking them and having them cashed himself, claiming that he had bought them at a "share." One was made payable to Nowt, Staples, who had been dead for some time before the date of check. The amount has realized thus fraudulently is known to be over $10,000, and will probably go near that amount when every thing is discovered. He has been carrying this on for several months, one bogus check having been discovered dated Oct. 7th, 1891.

His examining trial for the Hancock offenses was continued at Haverly last Saturday until Monday, and on being adjourned his visit to his home until 1 o'clock p. m. to-day, because of the absence of important prosecuting witnesses.

At the continuance Monday, G. D. Chambers, attorney for the defense, stated to the Judge that Marlow protested his innocence, and that he believed that he had been to the company's books, that he could show them wherein they were mistaken, and convince them that he had done nothing wrong; that the officers of the company were willing to let him examine the books in their presence; and he requested that the Judge permit the prisoner to go to the Cigar Company's office, and that the Superintendent would stand personally responsible for his safe return to the residence that night. This was granted, and the examination was proceeded with, but Marlow was taken very sick, and it had to be suspended.

Marlow is considered a man of high standing in the red crop and produces a good article, is very likely to be the man that will sell his raising for the most money next winter.
